Catholic Graveyard Benefit. EDITOR STAR: In the dramatic hall, at Sc auton, Aug. 28, a brilliant entertainment was given by the Pascagoula amateurs for the purpose of raising money to build a fence around the Catholic cemetery, which attracted visitors from Moss Point, West Pascagoula and the Seashore. The house was well filled with spectators. The programme: "En Avaunt," by Miss A. F. K-, was splendidly performed, and was the creme de la creme of the instrumental performance of the evening, notwithstanding the piano was badly out of tune. "Love's Request" (vocai), by Miss A. B-, lacked spirit and patnes in the execution. I would remark that it is not doing the singer justice in placing his or her back to the audience. It not only destroys the effect but also the sound is impaired. It would be more pleasing to the spectators if the per-former's face could be seen. The acting charade "Independent" was as well performed as could be expected. Charades are only fit for parlor amusement, and not suitable to be acted before a It was only a child, scarcely three It was only a child, scarcely three mixed audience, "John Murray," by month's old, sleeping in the cradle be- W. It was her only tempt at acting I have ever seen him child, her only companion, its father and infused an unusual amount of enhaving gone to the home above three ergy into its personation—which is new weeks before its existence. It wakes and moves as if in pain; its cheeks grow white; the life-color seems to leave it, which only a moment ago shone so it, which only a moment ago shone so brightly and promising. It feels the tie better taste it would have been more threatening affliction, despair gnawing its way through her drooping heart.

Doath leaves; God has spared the baby boy. The mother rises, and with that him he is one of our best amateurs; for instance as corporal in the "Bar-rack Room." "Augustus Murray," by A. Chisholm, what little he had to do did it well. He has considerable histrionic talent, and with proper instruc-tion would make a good low comedian. "Jennie Bouncer," by Miss J. B—, was well done. She understood what she babe whom twenty years ago was so dangerously ill? Those gray hairs, cansed not by age but sorrow, answers too plainly what has been the fate of that mother's love. Reader, that boy's life and mother's suffering are too sad for qualification, too much in need of sympathy for recollection to bring to a grateful son's aver, too long to write a performed, considering they had no rewas acting. Miss A. B-, as "Mary Reynolds," brought out of this part all there was in it. I was disappointed in fall account. That child, once so bright, started on life's journey with a mother's advice and prayers. Alas, they were easily doomed by the delusions of bad companions, and the voice of a once grateful heart drowned by the rattling acting charade: "Erasmus Evergreen," about the railroad between Scranton and the Seashore. It will never do to let such an important project fall through.

—Roy. W. E. Paxton, of Memphis, Tenn., preached at the Moss Point Baptist church last Sunday morning and at Scranton at night. He left yesterday for Memphis, and the voice of a once grateful heart drowned by the rattling glasses and merry voices of a salcon. No more are those steps guided by the hand of a fond mother. Where is that mother, young man? While you are under the influence of that accursed stuff I ask where is that mother? With an oath you turn from me and seek your friends (?). Ah, man, they are four friends. See how carefully they of the author, which is the ascerat of the suthor, which is the ascerat of the suthor. takes her manuscript speech and offers to read it, and the curtain falls on the fever patients, or vessels with the fever mind.

The mayor of Waco, Texas, went to Chicago on business a fortnight ago, and during his absence some one presented his resignation to the council. It upon the stage is unknown to him. "Nellie," by Miss A. F. K-, does not suit her; doing housework is not her forte. "John," by J. F. Delmas, was good; he naturally makes a good servant. "Les Guardes du Roi," by Miss M. K.—, was well played. "Handful of Earth," by Miss A. F. K.—, was by far the best song of the evening. It was sung with great feeling. This young lady has not a strong voice, but very sweet, and has good control of it. The performance concluded with the acting charade "Croquet." "Harry Lear," by Johnnie Foster, was spoken with a loud and distinct voice, jerking his words out as if there was an obstruction in his throat, and making nonsense of the text by running his sentences together while speaking. If he had studied the text more closely he would have notice. the stops—commas, colons and periods. "John Smith"—a theatrical lover—by Chas, Sarragin, would have been well

Chas, Sarrazin, would have been well done with proper instruction. In hearing H. Grant Willis as "Pat Marley," I alter my previous opinion of his making love upon the stage. Stick to the Irishman, Grant. You make love in Irish splendidly. It is the best role you have yet undertaken. "Lena Le Vail," by Miss I. D—, was well dressed and good. "Bridget," by Miss J. B—. On each appearance she improves; she is a natural actress.

Mr. Editor, if I have criticised the young ladies and gentlemen too closely love is. It is a love too deep for one to attempt to express; too great for comparison. Look at the sadness of Mary, the mother of our Savior. She knew that it was our Lord's mission to die on the tree for our redemption, but, Mr. Editor, if I have criticised the young ladies and gentlemen too closely it is not for the purpose of finding fault, but that some of their defects may be pointed out to them, so that they may be remedied at their next entertainment. No small degree of talent was exhibited by the performers, and Scranton contains the best musical and dramatic talent of any town of its size in the State.
